When is “Daddy’s Day”?

By Anthony Reed
Scout Staff

Millions of men across the nation will be pampered and spoiled Sunday for Father’s Day. This should be a day of reflection for many men (and some dual-role women) who know, understand and endure the challenges of parenting. As the father of two daughters, ages nearly 20 and 17, I look at this day slightly different than most.

About 13 years ago, I recall watching television with my youngest daughter when a commercial appeared promoting a Father’s Day sale.

She watched the media advertisement carefully, and when it ended, she turned and looked at me with those big, bright eyes and asked, “Daddy, when is Daddy’s Day?”

Forgetting the vast intelligence of a (then) 4-year-old, I told her it was Sunday.

With one hand on her hip, and shaking her index finger at me, she said, “No, Daddy. Sunday is Father’s Day! When do I get you a present for Daddy’s Day?”

Realizing her inquiry was serious, I pondered it further on my own, attempting to distinguish between being a father and/or daddy.

After about three hours of private, intense thought on the subject, I came to these basic conclusions concerning the Father vs. Daddy Debate posed by my inquisitive, precocious daughter:

1. Almost any male can become a father.
2. Being a father is easy.

See DADDY, page A15

Soldiers reminded of Standards of Conduct

As we approach our Army’s 231st birthday, I ask each of you to think about what it means to be a Soldier. You are serving in the best fighting force the world has ever known. Our Nation rightfully demands that we adhere to the highest standards of conduct at all times.

Our recent observance of Memorial Day honors the sacrifices of past warriors and heroes. Their stories are shining examples of what our Nation expects from its sons and daughters. They remind us of the importance of the Army Values, the Warrior Ethos and the Soldier’s Rules. Think about these principles. Talk with your leaders, peers, and subordinates about them. And most importantly, follow these baseline standards of conduct at all times.

Many of you have faced or will face deadly situations requiring you to quickly make the right decision. Keep the Army Values, the Warrior Ethos and the Soldier’s Rules constantly in the forefront of your minds. America expects disciplined, professional conduct from all of us in uniform, and I am confident you will set the standard for others to follow.

The Soldier’s Rules

- (1) Soldiers fight only enemy combatants.
- (2) Soldiers do not harm enemies who surrender. They disarm them and turn them over to their superior.
- (3) Soldiers do not kill or torture enemy prisoners of war.
- (4) Soldiers collect and care for the wounded, whether friend or foe.
- (5) Soldiers do not attack medical personnel, facilities, or equipment.
- (6) Soldiers destroy no more than the mission requires.
- (7) Soldiers treat civilians humanely.
- (8) Soldiers do not steal. Soldiers respect private property and possessions.
- (9) Soldiers should do their best to prevent violations of the law of war.
- (10) Soldiers report all violations of the law of war to their superior.

“Military tradition establishes order, and discipline, and it is the basis of the esprit de corps that the Army prides itself with.”

“Military tradition is good for the junior Soldiers because it shows them where we came from, because everything started with our traditions. It’s good for them to see it. It’s good for them to participate in it.”

“I think the military is based on tradition and it’s good to continue tradition to enhance pride and esprit de corp.”

“[It’s] important for today’s Army because it goes back to the traditions we held years ago in the past. They help us remember where we came from and how important that is to keep the discipline that armies had back then so we can maintain that today.”

“The traditions that we have date us back to our origins. Without our history and knowing our past and continuing the historic traditions, we won’t keep the insight and the focus of where our customs and courtesies came from.”

Army restructures commands

Army News Service

The Army is reorganizing its commands and specified headquarters to accelerate transformation efforts and increase the Army's responsiveness at home and abroad.

The new structure identifies three types of headquarters: Army Commands, Army Service Component Commands and Direct Reporting Units.

"Breaking the major Army commands out into three entities recognizes the roles and scopes of units' authorities and responsibilities," said Col. John Phelan of the Office of Institutional Army Adaptation. "This restructuring defines, aligns and assigns. It also gives functional experts the responsibility and authority to provide seamless support."

The three Army Commands are: U.S. Army Forces Command (designated by the Secretary of the Army as both an Army Command under the direction of Headquarters, Department of the Army and the Army Service Component Command to U.S. Joint Forces Command), U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command and U.S. Army Materiel Command.

The nine Army Service Component Commands are comprised primarily of operational organizations serving as the Army component for a combatant commander. They are:

- U.S. Army Europe,
- U.S. Army Central,
- U.S. Army North,
- U.S. Army South,
- U.S. Army Pacific,
- U.S. Army Special Operations Command,

- Military Surface Deployment and Distribution Command, and
- U.S. Army Space and Missile Defense Command/Army Strategic Command and Eighth U.S. Army.

Each of the 11 Direct Reporting Units are comprised of one or more units with institutional or operating functions, providing broad general support to the Army in a normally single, unique discipline not available elsewhere in the Army. They are:

- U.S. Army Network Enterprise Technology Command/9th Signal Command (Army) (NETCOM/9th SC (A)),
- U.S. Army Medical Command,
- U.S. Army Intelligence and Security Command,
- U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command,
- U.S. Army Corps of Engineers,
- U.S. Army Military District of Washington,
- U.S. Army Test and Evaluation Command,
- U.S. Military Academy,
- U.S. Army Reserve Command,
- U.S. Army Acquisition Support Command and
- U.S. Army Installation Management Agency.

Realignment changes were necessitated by the Army's changing missions, said Lt. Col. Darrell Wilson, functional team leader for the realignment.

"In the global-basing strategy that's been put out, we're going to become, for the most part, a CONUS-based force that projects capability out to where it needs to be projected," Wilson said. "We're becoming modu-

John Grimes, Assistant Secretary of Defense, Network and Information Integration/Department of Defense chief information officer, was the guest speaker at the 146th Anniversary Signal Ball hosted by the 11th Signal Battalion and NETCOM/9th ASC. Grimes also presented the Signal Corps Regimental Association Bronze order of Mercury, a lifetime achievement award, to several of the attendees. More than 400 people attended the Signal Ball which was held at the Thunder Mountain Activity Center Friday night.

lar so we can quickly form up and tailor the right tools for the right job, making us a more agile, adaptable and flexible service."

The restructuring accomplishes four objectives:

- It recognizes the global role and multi-disciplined functions of the Army Commands;
- It establishes the Army Service Component Commands as reporting directly to the Department while serving as the Army's single point of contact for a combatant command;
- It acknowledges Direct Reporting Units as functional proponents at the Department of the Army level; and
- It enables the Army to set the foundation for gaining better effectiveness and efficiencies by transforming its business processes, while operationally focusing the theater Armies to combatant commands.

Lineage and heraldic honors will be preserved in the command names and their insignia.

"The Chief of Staff and the Secretary of the Army said, 'We want to keep alive and link these folks to a patch that keeps the history of the field Army moving,'" Wilson said. "So, the Third Army will become U.S. Army Central; it will be the same organization; they won't change their patch but officially they become U.S. Army Central."

PDSR gives Soldiers better customer service

By Anthony Reed

Scout Staff

With Soldiers on-call for deployment more and more, maintaining personnel records can be a daunting task.

A new Army-wide program – Personnel Services Delivery Redesign – is being implemented to deliver personnel support as close as possible to Soldiers and commanders, according to Pamela A. Singer, chief, Military Personnel Division.

"The PSDR will align personnel support with the Army expeditionary, brigade-centric force," she explained. "It's a process re-engineering effort by the Army G-1 [Personnel, Adjutant, Administrative section] and the U.S. Army Soldier Support Institute, Adjutant General School."

Singer supervises the delivery of military personnel support to the Fort Huachuca community – including Army Signal Command's 11th Signal Brigade. The PSDR initiative will be implemented for the brigade's nearly 2,500 Soldiers.

According to Singer, PSDR involves more than the migration of records maintenance functions. "Besides maintaining their own military personnel files, human resources specialists at the brigade and battalion-level will also be responsible for issuing their own identification documents [military ID cards, ID tags, medical category tags, etc.], managing the unit's enlisted promotion system [for staff sergeants and below], and processing their own routine personnel actions [i.e. Married Army Couples Program requests, Military Occupational Specialty orders, and Special Duty Pay orders]."

Singer said PSDR will greatly improve military personnel support throughout the Fort Huachuca military community. Non-deployable and non-tactical functions such as the Transition Center, Casualty Assistance, Retiree Services, Student Personnel Services will continue to be provided by the post's Military Personnel Division. "We will use the decrease in workload caused by PSDR to increase support to these entities."

According to Singer, the final transition for PSDR is still being developed. The transition has already begun and will continue until all 11th Signal Brigade units are trained and capable of providing the necessary personnel support to its Soldiers.

May Civilian of the Month named

Patrick McCathern, instructor with the Communications Security Logistics Activity Information Assurance Training Center, Command Security Logistics Agency, received his award during the June 7 Military Affairs Committee luncheon at the Thunder Mountain Activity Center.

McCathern was instrumental in developing a qualitative/quantitative customer feedback mechanism that will be used to enhance the existing course of instruction and improve student understanding of course material according to Thomas R. Muffler, chief, Information Assurance Training Center who nominated him for the award.

"Not only is Pat an exceptional instructor and professional, he is an outstanding member of the DOD community as national spokesman for the National Institute of Mental Health. His genuine sense of caring led Pat to be recognized by the Program Director, Mental Health Policy, Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense, for his efforts to promote and protect the health and well being of all our military men and women," Muffler said.

Five candidates, including Muffler, were nominated for the Civilian of the Month honor.

Thrift Shop awards grants

By Joan Vasey

Scout staff

What does the Fort Huachuca Thrift Shop have to do with spaying and neutering pets, swim equipment for youth, the Sierra Vista Christmas/Holiday Concert, and assistance to disabled American veterans, their dependents and survivors living anywhere in Cochise County?

Plenty.

The Cochise County Humane Society, the Thunder Mountain Aquatics Club, the Disabled American Veterans, and the Sierra Vista Community Chorus Society each received one of 19 grants awarded by the Fort Huachuca Thrift Shop, totaling nearly $25,000 this fiscal year, which runs from July 1 through June 30. All together, the Thrift Shop disbursed $24,848.35 to the 19 groups. This does not include the scholarships they awarded.

The thrift shop granted $20,500 to twenty-three recipients.

According to Jean Whitmer, member of the disbursement committee and Thrift Shop volunteer, any non-profit group may apply for a grant or award with a few limitations. The Thrift Shop will not donate funds to programs to raise funds, for the purchase of items for resale or for money to fund grant writing. Funds can't be used for dinners or luncheons, to pay salaries or to fund events after-the-fact. Otherwise, there are no restrictions on what non-profit groups can request.

Chief Warrant Officer Troy Astrup accepts a check for $1,225.00 for the Thunder Mountain Aquatics Club on Fort Huachuca from Lynn Michaud, a volunteer at the Fort Huachuca Community Thrift Shop.

Memory Walk and American Cancer Society Relay for Life programs were also awarded a grant. The St. Vincent de Paul Community Food Bank added groceries to the shelves thanks to Thrift Shop funding. The Widowed Support Center and four military units and organizations also were granted money raised through sale of unwanted goods accepted as consignments or donations at the Thrift Shop.

Applications are available at the Thrift Shop. The two-page application is simple to complete. Only non-profit organizations that are 501(c)(3) and have a tax identification number are eligible for consideration. Except for some military organizations, groups must attach a copy of the letter from the IRS stating the organization is tax exempt and showing the group's tax number.

The criteria used to determine the merits of a request are:

- Organization's activities to raise money
- Organization's composition
- Effort to obtain funds from other sources

For more information, call Jean Whitmer at 378-3147.

Garrison faces serious budget cuts

Scout reports

Based on the projected Installation Management Agency budget, Garrison is not sure it will receive even half of the $16 million it needs for the last three months of the current federal fiscal year, according to Garrison Commander Col. Jonathan Hunter.

The situation is ominous. According to IMA, based on funding projections, IMA will take action to reduce expenditures by at least $530 million for the balance of the fiscal year, which runs through September.

Current Base Operations Support

funding for IMA is approximately $530 million short for the year based on current rates of spending. The shortage is due primarily to unbudgeted "fact-of-life" costs such as fuel price increases, physical security costs and foreign currency exchange rate differences.

According to IMA, effective immediately, commanders are beginning the process to release temporary and term employees as quickly as legally possible, except for those who directly support life, health, safety and the GWOT. A 100-percent civilian hiring freeze is in effect. Commanders are also developing spending plans for the balance of this year and next year that will provide the critical services to Soldiers and their families, while identifying the services that can be divested. Spending plans will identify contracts that can be reduced, cancelled or deferred until next year. Garrisons have been reducing cell phones and pagers, reducing government vehicle usage, and deferring as many expenses as possible in order to save money as well.

Already on Fort Huachuca, civil service employees are being offered voluntary early retirement and vacant positions are not being filled.

IMA officials state that these are extraordinary times for our Army – fighting a war on several fronts, maintaining combat readiness across the force, and transforming our warfighting force into the Army Modular Force; all being executed simultaneously. As a part of the Army, installations are faced with unprecedented resource challenges. IMA's top priority is to support the Global War on Terrorism while delivering vital services on installations to maintain Soldier wellbeing, and is confident the Army will be able to secure resources necessary to provide critical support to our Soldiers and their families. IMA's efforts to control costs, pursue efficiencies and implement cost-saving efforts are vital to mitigating the impact of these reductions to the Soldiers, family members and civilians who depend on installations for their vitality and life support.

No installations will fail. Activities in support of the Global War on Terrorism and immediate life, health and safety needs will be supported. All other programs and services are under review and garrison commanders are expected to find ways to locally reduce operating costs.

There should be no reductions this year for career permanent employees, but RIF procedures will be used in releasing term employees. Temporary employees are expected to be released IMA-wide by June 16.

IMA will continue to meet sustainability standards, as well as statutory and host-nation environmental requirements.

IMA is proceeding under the assumption that funding available for installations will continue to decline, but the importance of installations continues to increase. They are working to strategically reevaluate the way they fund installations and the services they provide. The Scout will publish a detailed list of service changes customers will see in next week's issue.

Soldiers rappel from natural landforms during training exercise Saturday

By Joan Vasey

Scout staff

Company B, 305th Military Intelligence Battalion, 111th Military Intelligence Brigade combined training and fun Saturday during a rappelling exercise at the Rappel Cliffs in Garden Canyon.

Early that morning, in "train the trainer" fashion, three rappelling instructors trained about 15 Soldiers in rappel techniques. Later, the previously trained and new instructors trained about 60 Soldiers attending Initial Entry Training here.

"This was something fun for the Soldiers, as well as a confidence builder," said 1st Lt. Matt Foster, Company B executive officer. "The Soldiers learned how to tie knots and Swiss seats."

Foster explained that the Fort's rappelling tower is closed, and could be for quite a while, adding that there is no other place on Post where they could train. He also explained that training on natural landforms is, "... more fun and more challenging."

The training will better enable the Soldiers to support the Army and nation, at peace and at war.

Spears receives the Army's first $1,000 recruiting referral bonus

Staff Sgt. Consuelo Spears accepts the Army's first $1,000 recruiting referral bonus from Command Sgt. Maj. Frank Norris of the Phoenix, Ariz. Recruiting Battalion. The check is the first one issued to a Soldier under the Army's new referral bonus pilot program that began Jan. 18.

Story and photos by Rob Martinez
Scout Staff

Staff Sgt. Consuelo Spears received the Army's first $1,000 recruiting referral bonus June 8th, in a ceremony at historic Brown Parade Field here. The check is the first one issued to a Soldier under the Army's new referral bonus pilot program that began Jan. 18. Command Sgt. Maj. Frank Norris, U.S. Army Phoenix Recruiting Battalion, presented the award.

Spears, a U.S. Army Intelligence School and Center and Fort Huachuca Soldier, referred Pvt. Bartolomeij Rdes, a family friend. As Spears received her bonus check, Rdes graduated from Advanced Individual Training at Fort Sill, Okla. His Military Occupational Specialty is 13B, a cannon crew member.

Rdes is the first referral candidate to graduate from basic training and complete the formal training for his MOS. The referring Soldier or Army retiree cannot receive the bonus until the referral candidate enlists in the Army, completes basic training and then graduates from AIT.

Spears has been in the Army for 13 years, is married, and has three daughters. "The Army's been good to me," she said. "I've been afforded a lot of opportunities. If I had stayed at home, I wouldn't be as far in my life as I am now."

Spears said she learned that staying aware of what is going on in the Army is key to her success.

"I'm always reading any type of info the Army puts out. So I saw this thousand dollar referral bonus. It didn't really come into play until my husband told me, 'Hey, Bart's thinking about coming into the military.' I said, 'By the way, ... we can get a thousand dollar bonus if we refer him into the military.'"

"So my husband called Bart back and Bart was like, 'Okay, that sounds great!' He was really excited about coming into the military.

"Inadvertently, I didn't realize how much impact our family had for him to come into the military, because he was always hanging around my husband or around the house. And we went skiing together. ... So, after my husband talked to him, he said fine, and I went to the Web site and researched a little bit more. I put in all my information that I needed for the SMART program."

Rdes then worked with his recruiter and enlisted. During basic training and advanced individual training, Rdes kept in touch with Spears and her husband.

"He's been writing my husband back and forth, calling on the phone ... to make sure everything was going good," Spears said.

Rdes met Spears' husband at his job in Chicago, around August 2004, and they became friends. They were stockers at a plumbing equipment company. Spears was stationed there at Headquarters, U. S. Military Entrance Processing Command as a personnel administrator. Rdes did not realize that Spears' wife was in the Army until he visited them.

"He asked me for information about the military and I told him the truth," Spears said. "I said it's what you make of it. What you do with it is how it will go for you.

And, he still likes it. He's waiting to go to his first duty station, in Germany, and he's excited, and that made me excited, because I had an impact on somebody's life."

The impact was significant for 24-year-old Rdes. "He was going to college, but it was costing him too much, and ... the whole package of the Army

Help spread the safety message, become a Motorcycle Mentor

By Martin Shapiro

Safety Specialist, Fort Huachuca Safety Office

Everyone needs a little help at some time in their life. They may need help studying, cleaning up or with physical training.

Those who work at the Safety Office want to help new motorcycle riders by enlisting the aid of experienced riders to serve as mentors for the less experienced, with the purpose of saving lives and reducing injuries. The Army has developed a program for people with several years of motorcycle riding experience to become mentors of those who are just starting out.

So the Safety Office wants to start a motorcycle club here. It's not a 'gang,' but a club for experienced and not-so-experienced riders, with the hope the experienced motorcycle rider can pass on his or her knowledge to others.

Let's face it, it is a dangerous world out there for those on two wheels. There are too many people who either don't see motorcycle riders, don't care about them or in some cases, like to intimidate people on a motorcycle.

A skilled rider knows how to handle a motorcycle in many precarious situations and what to look for, too. Being a mentor is an opportunity to pass on wisdom to the novice or less experienced rider with the goal of saving a life or a limb. Those who have ridden a motorcycle have many tips to pass on, not only about riding, but motorcycle care, as well.

Those interested in starting this sanctioned and command-sponsored club should contact Martin Shapiro at martin.shapiro@us.army.mil.

May water use is 15.7 percent less than last May

Scout Reports

The water pumpage for May 2006 is 38,440,000 gallons or 118 acre-feet and is equivalent to 1.2 million gallons per day.

The May 2006 pumpage is 15.7 percent less than that pumped in May 2005 (140 acre-feet) and is 55 percent less than the 24-year (1982-2005) May average (263 acre-feet). The May 2006 pumpage of 118 acre-feet is the lowest pumpage for May during the 24-year period (1982-2005).

Total water pumped year-to-date (490 acre-feet) is 14.2 percent less than that pumped for the same period in 2005 (571 acre-feet).

May water usage at the U.S. Forest Service Air Tanker Station at Libby Army Airfield is 100,036 gallons. Year-to-date use is 145,911 gallons (0.44 acre-feet) which were primarily used to fight the 103 Fire.

Treated effluent reuse for May is 27.9 acre feet. Year-to-date treated effluent reuse is 82.6 acre-feet. The year-to-date reuse (82.6 acre-feet) is 27.2 percent less than that reused for the same period in 2005 (113.4 acre-feet). This is water that did not have to be pumped from the groundwater aquifer (a water and energy savings) to irrigate the Mountain View Golf Course, Chaffee Parade Field and Prosser Village.

Treated effluent for May delivered to the East Range Recharge Facility was 30.3 acre-feet. Year-to-date treated effluent delivery is 183.52 acre-feet. The year-to-date delivery is 1.1 percent more than that delivered for the same period in 2005 (181.5 acre-feet).

The lower water use in May is attributed to the continued effects of the Water Wise and aggressive water leak detection programs. The on-going construction projects, family housing demolition/construction and new elementary school had little water use associated with their activities.

and my selling it to him was, 'Hey, you go in the Army, the Army will pay for you to go to college. He was trying to work and go to college at the same time, and he wasn't going anywhere, and he was like, 'I need a change.' And no one believed he was going to do it, but he did it anyway. He's happy that he did it."

The sales pitch to a single Soldier was not difficult for Spears.

"It was just a normal, 'Hey how is the military,' and I told him ... 'If you can get through basic training and AIT, the rest of the Army is not so bad.'

"I went through AIT at skill level ten [entrance level] again, and it wasn't as bad as it was when I first came in. I won't say it was really bad, but it was different. It's a different Army. They make it more comfortable for [Soldiers] to actually obtain the MOS or to obtain a military career. But it all depends on that person. And he took that, and with his personality and the way he is, he just went through it all."

Spears also said that her family broke Rdes' image of the "military family" based on movies and stereotypes. "We acted like a normal family ... it's as if we were civilians, but he was really impressed at how the military works on behalf of my husband because my husband is the one who was really more in contact with him ... we really didn't know we were selling anything. We didn't know we had that much of an impact. We were just being ourselves.

"Seeing all that, and putting it all together, he [Rdes] said, 'Hey, I can do this.'"

Although Rdes was impressed with what he saw, there were other incentives at play as well.

Spears told Rdes that the enlistment bonuses are good, but, "If you're going to get an MOS, get something that you like. So that later on, if you decide to make this a career, you're not just doing it for the money. Yeah, the money's great; it's an enticing thing, but make sure you go in for the right reason."

It appears that Spears has found the right reason, and the couple has manifested it into a fine Army career. She also said, "We've had good assignments. He can't complain. He's been able to raise the kids, and been able to help me with my career. Help me in going the direction I need to go in. He's been very supportive, very supportive!"

Commentary

From DADDY, page A2

3. However, being a daddy is a never-ending process. (There are no "how to" books or instruction manuals for this job.)

Though it is hard work being a daddy, it is the most fulfilling, rewarding job I have ever had. It is a 24-hour-a-day, seven days a week, 365 days per year job. The payment of love and adulation is excellent, and fringe benefits include an infinite number of "I love you's," and hugs and kisses.

Father's Day is the day many children pay homage to their protector, hero, role model and best friend.

Father's Day is also "just another day" in the life of children reared in single-parent households. (Hopefully, these children will honor their mothers, fathers or other adult figures for carrying out the tough, dual-role responsibilities of father and mother.

Sadly, Father's Day is just another day in the life of two-parent households in which the father is always working – never taking time to play catch, shoot hoops, push the swings in the playground, share an ice cream sundae, or help with complicated homework.

Later on that evening, while tucking my youngest daughter in for a good night's sleep, I gently kissed her forehead. Again, she asked, "Daddy, when is Daddy's Day?"

This time I was prepared to answer. After briefly reflecting on how fortunate I am to have two beautiful, healthy daughters who want and need me in their precious lives, I replied, "Sunday is Father's Day, but every day is Daddy's Day."

My introspective daughter sat up in bed, scratched her head, and asked, with a look of seriousness on her young face, "Daddy, does that mean I have to get you a present every day?"

I laughed and hugged her tightly, attempting to hide my suddenly watery eyes as I kissed her goodnight. I then told her that calling me "Daddy" is the only present I will EVER need.

I wish everyone a Happy Father's Day on Sunday, but Happy Daddy's Day every day!!!

CISM Volleyball begins

Story and photos by Thom Williams

Scout Staff

The 27th Conseil International du Sport Militaire 2006 Volleyball Championships or World Military Volleyball Championships opened Saturday with a ceremony on Bujalski Field outside Barnes Field House here.

The nine nations that are competing in the tournament were introduced and marched into place.

The CISM and U.S. flags were hoisted under the watchful eyes of B Troop, 4th U.S. Cavalry (Memorial), a mounted unit in 1880s uniforms that represents Fort Huachuca's rich heritage. Fort Huachuca's Select Honor Guard salute battery fired a canon volley that echoed over Bujalski Field.

Maj. Gen. Barbara Fast, commanding general of the U.S. Army Intelligence Center and Fort Huachuca, had just flown in from Afghanistan the night before and was on hand to welcome the delegations to Fort Huachuca.

Maj. Deborah McNamara, U.S. women's team member and optometrist at Raymond W. Bliss Army Health Center here, lead players from Canada, China, Cyprus, Germany, India, South Korea, the Netherlands, Qatar and the United States in the athletes' oath.

Canadian Air Force Brig. Gen. Dwayne Lucas, the CISM vice president to the Americas for CISM and the chief of the volleyball section, greeted members of each country in their own language and declared the games open.

The audience was then treated to a Navajo hoop dance by the Redhouse Duo.

Following the ceremonies, the athletes mingled on the field and posed for pictures.

Lucas is the official CISM representative, and, as he explained it, he is the commanding officer of the exercise or the sporting event and the buck stops here. He ensures that the rules are followed and "Friendship through Sport" is met with all the teams.

"I'm very impressed with what Colonel Hunter [Fort Huachuca garrison commander] has done with his team," Lucas said. Whether it's the food, accommodations or the transportation, everybody is first class."

Lucas, the director general of the Canadian Air Force Aerospace Equipment Program Management Division, said many of the players taking part in the tournament will be on their country's national teams during the 2008 Olympics in China.

Lucas said that his son plays on the Canadian volleyball team and carried the flag during the opening ceremony.

The former CISM soccer player faced a command decision a few hours later at Murr Community Center where the draw to decide competition match-ups was held. Lt. Col. Harry de Jong, manager of the Netherlands men's volleyball team spoke on behalf of the other teams and said the tournament format needed to be changed because too few teams showed up to play.

CISM officials tried to come up with a new plan that would make all parties content.

One of those conditions was that some teams would have to play two best-of-5 matches in the same day.

That proved to be the deal-breaker as at least two countries thought that unacceptable and the original format won out.

The tournament then got underway early Sunday

Dietitian departs. Scout says, “Thanks.”

Capt. Jennifer Rodriguez goes above and beyond the call of most dietitians. In March, National Nutrition Month, she talked to commissary customers about good nutrition while surrounded by healthful foods.

Readers who’ve enjoyed the popular, “Ask the Dietitian” column that has run about every other week in the Scout may be dismayed to learn that its author, Capt. Jennifer Rodriguez, is due to leave Fort Huachuca tomorrow.

While it’s bad news for our readers, we wish her the best of luck on her new assignment. She reports at the Army Medical Department Center and School on Fort Sam Houston, Texas, on June 30. There, she will instruct Army Dietary Technicians attending the 91M Military Occupational Specialty training.

From amino acids to zinc, we’ve enjoyed reading about the broad spectrum of dietary information Rodriguez has shared through her column, and appreciated the opportunity to convey this information to Scout readers for their health and benefit.

Ma’am, on behalf of The Fort Huachuca Scout and our reading audience, we thank you for being a contributing volunteer writer for the past several years.

Sincerely,

The Fort Huachuca Scout staff and Public Affairs office

To further honor service members, TEP invited Maranda Ostrum, the 8-year-old daughter of Fort Huachuca Soldier Sgt. David Ostrum of Company C, 40th Signal Battalion, to throw a ceremonial opening pitch. Ostrum is currently deployed to Iraq. Staff Sgt. David Marrero of USAIC and Fort Huachuca General Operations and Plans volunteered to accompany Maranda and her two sisters, Topanga, 5, and Ashley, 9, during the opening ceremony. "It's really nice," said their mother, Rita Ostrum. "I'm happy for them. It gives us something to do while he's [their father] gone."

Singing the national anthem was 1st Lt. Norberto Daluz, of the 5th Battalion Military Intelligence, 104th Regiment, (It) United States Army Reserve Total Army School System MI School. "I think this is a once in a lifetime opportunity," he said. "I was just fortunate because the U.S. Army band ... could not play tonight, so there was an opening for me to sing. This is probably the largest venue I've ever sang at."

Tucson Sidewinder pitcher Edgar Gonzalez faced the Salt Lake Bees. The Sidewinders won 8-7, extending their winning streak to eight games.

Below: Sgt. First Class Thomas Richardson and Cpl. Chris Carlson of the Old Pueblo Recruiting Station, Tucson Recruiting Company, talk to fans during the Tucson Sidewinders' Military Appreciation Night. Richardson will return to Fort Huachuca to teach part of the 97B counter intelligence course, once he finishes his tour as a recruiter.

Daluz is currently on an Active Duty for Special Work Tour with the Tucson Recruiting Company. He said he is trained in classical voice, and has done musical theater and opera.

During the singing of the national anthem, little league players stood at their respective positions along with the Sidewinders players on the field. Fort Huachuca was represented by the Marlins, a little league team here.

In tradition with Military Appreciation Night, the Army, Air Force, Navy, and Marines set up recruiting stands, and gave away promotional items.

Nearly 10,000 fans showed up to enjoy the game and honor America's service members, and the Sidewinders maintained their first-place lead with their second consecutive walk-off victory against the Salt Lake Bees. Tucson lost the lead in the ninth, then entered the bottom of the tenth down 7-5 and managed three runs to win the game 8-7. The win extended the club's winning streak to eight games.

Interest from the film industry in locations in Cochise County communities has increased dramatically since the first of the year when the State of Arizona enacted tax incentives to help attract filming to the State. The workshop is a boot-camp style workshop taught by experienced working professionals from the Arizona production community and is designed to provide comprehensive training in the duties performed by professional Production Assistants in film and television.
